VantagePoint
THE NEWSLETTER
Visit LeadVantage.com

LeadVantage CONSULTING

Issue: # 3 February 2009

2009 has definitely started off with a big bang. For many of us, we are forced to at least consider a return to the fundamentals. This is a good thing. We believe in focusing on the business basics. This newsletter will give you some insight into what we consider fundamental to businesses. We'd love the opportunity to manage your projects, improve your business, and coach your managers in the spirit of getting back to basics and getting ahead.

Best Wishes for 2009,
LeadVantage Consulting

P.S. Be sure to cast your vote in our first LeadVantage Poll on meeting effectiveness (check it out in the right column).

A Letter From Barack Obama To Corporate America

by Eileen Koch

OK, so this isn't really a letter from Barack Obama to Corporate America. But if it was, I hope it would say the following... Read More

Articles

A Letter From Barack Obama To Corporate America

Strike While The Iron Is Hot: Project Momentum

Feedback: The No-Cost, High-Impact Improvement You Can Do Today

How often are the meetings you attend productive?

Click Here to Cast Your Vote and See Poll Results

Quick Links

Newsletter Sign-Up

Resource Center

More On Us

Contact Us

Strike While The Iron Is Hot: Project Momentum

by Lindsay King

You may not realize that project managers have something in common with blacksmiths. Both need to work quickly at times when "the iron is hot." This article explores how this concept applies to project momentum and provides tips for making the most of momentum. Read More

Feedback: The No-Cost, High-Impact Improvement You Can Do Today

by Todd Gettelfinger

Feedback is to business like flossing is to dental care. Neither costs much and both have clear, well-documented benefits. We'll skip the discussion about why people floss or not; instead, this article will help you brush up on feedback. It will explore some common reasons why people don't effectively use feedback and how to get good at it. Read More LeadVantage Consulting is a management consulting firm in Chicago. We are experts at helping organizations and managers handle change. LeadVantage offers teams of experienced business people using proven methodologies to quickly help you improve your business and deliver results by:

- running projects
- improving processes
- building organizations
- developing managers

Our experience tells us that you have enough to worry about with running your business. Let LeadVantage Consulting help.